

THE TWO ROOSEVELTS

By Associated Press

Berlin, July 20—Nazi Germany's repressive fiat bore down even more heavily today on Catholics, Jews and "reactionaries" in Adolf Hitler's battle to make them subservient to his party-controlled state.

Catholic priests were warned, in a decree issued by the ministry of justice, to be careful in their comments from the pulpit tomorrow on the intensified campaign against "political Catholicism."

Japan Spurns Italian Protest on African Trade

By Associated Press

Addis Ababa, July 20—Without waiting for written instructions, today presented Italy's protest to the Foreign Office against the "bitter note" of the attacks on Italy, contained in Emperor Haile Selassie's speech before Parliament Thursday.

Rome, July 20—Japan and Italy clashed today over trade with Abyssinia.

The Italian consul in Tokyo, it was revealed here, went to the Japanese Foreign Office to protest the crowding out of Italian goods from Abyssinia by cheaper Japanese products.

The spokesman for the Foreign Office replied bluntly the success of the Japanese policy was due to their cheapness and "superior quality."

"She has found nothing better than a drunken brawl between native employees of a commercial agency and local police to distort, exaggerate and misrepresent to the world what is a grave international incident."

Japanese Call for War on Italy

London, July 20—A propaganda movement favoring Japanese intervention in the Italo-Abyssinian dispute was launched in Tokyo today, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch.

Scores Flee Tear Gas Bomb Downtown

Occupants of two big downtown buildings got a taste of warfare today when tear gas drove them, crying and coughing, into the street.

More than 80 men and girl workers were driven from the Kimball building, 40 Court street, and the Kimball building, 76 Tremont street.

Although only one gas bomb was exploded, all 12 floors of both buildings were filled with the gas.

The bomb was exploded near the state income tax office on the second floor of 40 Court street.

A porter, Edward Henry of Macomber street, according to police, accidentally struck his broom handle against the trigger of the bomb under the cashier's desk.

The gas poured through the building, out into an air shaft in the rear, and into all the open windows of the Kimball Building.

By stairways and elevators men and girl workers fled from all the offices in both structures holding handkerchiefs to their noses.

The elevators were filled with coughing workers when police and firemen arrived.

They were ordered there by firemen after an hour before they could return to work. The accident occurred after 1 o'clock. Hundreds of other workers in the two buildings had left for the Saturday half-holiday.

The gas accumulated in the banking rooms of the United States Trust Co. on the first floor of the Kimball building.

The windows are sealed as a protection against thieves and all the gas had to be drawn out by ventilators.

Jockey's Ex Hit by Cupid

After waiting impatiently until her divorce from Carroll L. Hooley, former nationally known jockey, had become absolute, Mrs. Virginia A. Hooley announced today she would try matrimony a second time.

Mrs. Hooley, 29, of 334 Lashburn avenue, Cambridge, appeared before Judge Arthur P. Stone of the East Cambridge district court, accompanied by Raymond L. Elms, 47, who told the judge that she and Elms would be married at once.

They were granted a waiver of the five-day law.

Former Jockey Hooley, who was accustomed to drink a bottle of vinagar a day in order to keep his weight up, was 50 pounds lighter when he divorced his wife in 1933.

His marriage was not stepchildren, platonic and dinner plates were turned at him instead of endearing epithets, he testified.

Denver, July 20 (AP)—In a building crammed to the eaves with gold bars and gold coins, the employees are going payless.

Tokyo, July 20 (AP)—With naval officials secretive about details of the annual naval maneuvers, nearly 300 warships, consisting of the entire Japanese navy, assembled in southern waters today for the start of the Pacific war games.

Poisons Add to War Terrors

Editor's Note: Snake venom is only one of many virulent poisons which will be used to spread death and suffering in the unrestricted combat of the next war, H. R. Knickerbocker writes in the sixth article of his new series "The Great Chances."

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER

International News Service Staff Correspondent (World Copyright, 1935, by International News Service. Reproduction in Whole or Part Strictly Prohibited)

London, July 20 (INS)—Europe has worked for seventeen years on secret weapons and today several nations of this continent are believed to have privately concealed new instruments of death of a lethal power greater than any hitherto known. Only the next war will reveal them.

International exchange of new weapons was the rule before the war when private armaments manufacturers sold all comers.

The Maxim, original machine-gun, greatest new weapon between gun-power and the airplane, was offered to all.

Consequence was that when the war began in 1914 every nation had similar weapons on their display.

Four years of war so deepened national hatreds that international secrecy has become the rule.

Armament makes still sell their accustomed products to foreign nations but the new weapons remain closely guarded secrets of the armament offices.

Evidence of that is the existence of spy and counter-spy organizations in Europe on a scale unknown in the past. Richard Sorge, a Russian spy, estimates there are 10,000 spies operating in Europe today.

A rough estimate made for the League of Nations put the number of armies for espionage from the end of the war to today at over 30,000, compared with 1800 spies arrested in Europe during the entire 50 years preceding the great war.

New poisons are among the most important of these weapons, for the unarmament experts of the League of Nations have definitely seen the era of poison warfare.

They mean that whereas in the past the poisoning of a man was the poisoning of a nation, the new poisons are so potent that they are used in the next war, and also the individual soldier is armed against the use of poison in any form, and it will appear this time in unique and effective forms.

TO USE SNAKE VENOM

One form will be poisoned bullet. Russia's has been done. The extremely virulent animal poison, as snake venom. There is considerable apprehension that a chemical reproduction or modification of this venom may be applied to machine-gun bullets.

Of the 20 poison gases used in the last war, Europe's expert feared the arsenic gas and mustard gas. The arsenic gas causes "pain of the most terrific character in the head and chest, accompanied by the most appalling mental anguish and nausea."

"Some of the soldiers poisoned by these substances were so badly affected that they were unable to continue fighting and were killed by their own side."

The arsenic gas, it is asserted, would penetrate any of the respirators used in the last war.

MISSING LINK

An expedition into the wilds of Brazil to try to link man's kinship with apes in contrast to the Darwinian origin will be led shortly by Lawrence T. K. Griswold, a geologist and archaeologist.

Mr. Griswold, who has sought prehistoric signs in Java and in the Philippines, has been studying the relationship between man and the apes. American investigations lead him to believe in the existence there of an "anthropoid ape," the mythical "missing link."

Astor's Heir

Tucky French Has Final Say Whether He'll Be 'Bill'

Newport, R. I., July 20—"Just Plain Bill" Astor may not be named William, after all.

Usually the father of a son names the child, and leaves the naming of a daughter to the mother.

And John Jacob Astor, 3rd, indicated some time ago that should Ellen Tuck (French) Astor present him with a boy, he would break the long line of John Jacob with "Just Plain Bill."

But apparently he reckoned without "Tucky." Asked by the Boston Evening American if the 7½ pound heir to the huge Astor fortune had definitely been named, Francis Ormond French, formerly of Dedham, maternal grandfather, said:

"Certainly not." Just like that. No evasion, nor vagueness about it. The boy is not only John Jacob Astor's first son, and the fifth generation of the fur dynasty, but he is the Frenches' first grandson, too.

It appeared possible today that the maternal name might be included in that of the million-dollar baby who was born in Doctors' Hospital, New York, yesterday.

French further stated that John Jacob, 3rd, was going to continue his policy of working up through the International Mercantile Marine Company, of which his half-brother, Vincent is head.

In spite of his new responsibilities, Astor will continue in his $25-a-week capacity as shipping clerk until he has earned a promotion.

Mansion Ready for Heir

But that does not mean that his wife and baby will have to live in the sort of quarters that $25-a-week usually provides.

As soon as she can be moved from her three-room suite at Doctors' Hospital, Mrs. Astor and her young son will come here to live in their own home on Bellevue avenue.

It has been opened up, staffed and provisioned, and ready for some time past, it was learned.

Astor will remain in New York at his job. The fortune to which the newest of the Astors will be immediate heir is estimated at $10,000,000, at least, the amount to which Astor's trust fund of $5,000,000 grew under Vincent Astor's trusteeship.

But beside that there is the virtual certainty that he will inherit a very substantial portion of the original Astor wealth, now mostly controlled by Vincent Astor. That fortune is conservatively placed at hundreds of millions.

TUBS Vie With MOTORS

GLORIOUS PAST REBORN

By Associated Press
Portland, Me., July 20—New England firemen, in brilliant dress, paraded today in a procession contrasting the motorized efficiency of modern fire apparatus and the small hand tubs of earlier days.

The parade inaugurated the annual muster of the New England Veteran Firemen's Association and drew thousands of spectators.

A division of old hand tubs, polished to brilliance, featured the procession. Later today the tubs were to compete for the honor of squirting a stream of water the farthest distance.

Portland's modern apparatus led the parade and behind came a delegation of Maine chiefs, headed by Duncan C. McDonald of Portland, president of the New England Association.

Crews of six men to 50 drew the hand tubs along the streets, the ringing clang of the bells of the old engines reverberating along the main thoroughfare.

Thirty-six hand tubs paraded, the first section headed by Granite City tub from Quincy, Mass.

Then came the Defiance of North Grafton, Mass. One of the men hauling this tub, Walter Pigeon of North Grafton, was forced out when a wheel rim cut his hand.

Negutne of Newburyport, Mass., was accompanied by a fire and drum corps composed of Veterans of Foreign Wars headed by Miss Ruth Bartlett.

Old General Berry from Rockland was drawn by horses and accompanied by a large delegation. Oikos of Marblehead, Mass., truck drawn, was followed by a band.

Brookline, Mass., had two tubs in line, enterprise and protector. After Protection, from York, came a Legion drum and bugle corps from Stoughton, Mass., escorting Alabama Cook.

Waterbury, R. I., had one of the best units drawing Star No. One, followed by a turntable drum corps from Methuen, Mass.

General Taylor from Everett, Mass., had 45 men, while the Sagadahoc from Bath was drawn by 30 men.

After the horse drawn Essex from Essex, Mass., came the Edward Hopkins of North Grafton, Mass., truck drawn.

Salem of Salem, Mass., horse drawn, was accompanied by a drum corps and a delegation of 40 men. Then came the Columbia of Weymouth, Mass., Narragansett of Riverdale, R. I., and the Old Kennebec of Bath.

Torment from Lubec had 40 men while Germania of Chelsea, Mass., had a red shirred delegation of men and an auxiliary unit. Then came Tiger of Newburyport.

Smallest tub in the line was Water Witch of North Reading, Mass.

SOVIET SCHOOL BUST

Professors Quit, Americans Broke

Moscow, July 20—"The professors walked out!" And thus ended the intellectually massive project of the American University summer school in Moscow.

Two hundred Americans, ranging from gray-haired schoolmasters to wide-mouthed college freshmen and sophomores, gave up their scheme of a summer university in the Soviet capital. The bulk of them reverted to mere tourists.

The summer school, which opened last year, was officially "liquidated" by Soviet authorities on arrival of the students from Leningrad, with the explanation:

Two hundred Americans, ranging from gray-haired schoolmasters to wide-mouthed college freshmen and sophomores, gave up their scheme of a summer university in the Soviet capital. The bulk of them reverted to mere tourists.

Boston's Unfailing Heat Antidote—Broad Beaches

RUTH BENGIS MARCIA HOBEN RUTH SWIEGMAN DOT BRODY
It's lucky for old Odysseus that his fabled wanderings didn't take him past the sands of Revere beach where had mermaids as these enjoy sand and sea daily. Poor Penelope would have had to wait even longer than she did, had her skipper-husband's craft come to anchor within range of the smiles of Ruth Bengis, Marcia Hoben, Ruth Swiegmans and Dot Brody, all of Boston. All the beaches are crowded these days.

Sunburn, Sheets Kill 2 Babies

Death today ended an eighteen-months-old baby's fight of a week against sunburn.

Last Sunday Mrs. Helen Connerney, of 33 Harding street, Cambridge, took Margaret, the baby, and her three-year-old brother, Laurence Jr., to City Point beach.

Two happy hours, romping on the sand—in the sun—and then the family came home.

Monday little Margaret's sunburn bothered the child. Tuesday it had become very bad, and Mrs. Connerney took the infant to Cambridge Hospital.

There physicians treated the little girl, and told her mother to take her home, and apply baking soda and cold water.

The treatment didn't seem to help so Mrs. Connerney called in Dr. M. Fishman, who treated the child, and made several visits.

The sunburn proved to be too deep. Today little Margaret seemed to be sleeping. Several hours later Mrs. Connerney looked in on the baby. She was dead.

Infant in Hingham Suffocates in Bed

Mrs. Mabel Cash, 24, of Friend street, Hingham, found her 29-day-old son suffocated beside her. The child had become tangled in the bedclothes while his mother slept.

Frank Satter, son of Richard N. Satter, secretary of the Peabody Rotary Club, fell beneath the wheels of a Duvers-Peabody street car, which amputated his left arm and right leg, and dragged him 30 yards.

Joseph Brown, Riggs street, the operator of the car, said the child must have run out as the car passed. He was taken to the J. H. Thomas Hospital.

Girls Thwart Mad Clutch Of Neptune

By Associated Press

Mamaroneck, N. Y., July 20—Margaret Ascher, 11, and her sister, Naomi, 14, of 37 Barry avenue, were alive today because they refused to let go. Their sailboat overturned in Long Island Sound and they clung to it four hours through the storm last night.

The girls took the 18-foot sailboat out on the roughening water. Four miles off Rye it was tipped over by a gust of wind as the storm came up suddenly.

Other craft had sought port or their skippers were busy navigating and did not see the capsized boat.

When the Ascher girls did not reach home, the coast guard and clubs along the sound were notified. After they had been tossed in the water for four hours the tender of the Westchester Yacht club sighted their boat and brought them in.

"Way for a Sailor!" Betty Lou's at the Helm!

Avast, you landlubbers! The order is "Ready about—and hard a-lee!" and Betty Lou Bishop, "youngest skipper" of the Boston Yacht Club, is at the helm. She's a competent handler of all small sailing craft, and many a grownup justly envies her the skill she so frequently demonstrates.

Time to take a reef in the mainsail—and you more ready to scamper aloft and be about the business than six-year-old Betty Lou Bishop, "youngest skipper" of the Boston Yacht Club? She's the daughter of Mrs. Mary Bishop and the granddaughter of W. W. Wilson, Neponset shipbuilder.

Potential skipper of an America's Cup loop and most promising of all the young prospects is a girl.

Elizabeth Hovey?

No, sir! Betty Lou Bishop.

Betty Lou is six years old and admits to being a bit of a tomboy.

Descendant of generations of a seafaring and ship-building, she is spending her third summer in a locker hangar at the Boston Yacht Club showing the old-timers how to handle a boat, how to swim, how to fish.

She is the daughter of Mrs. Mary Bishop, and the granddaughter of W. W. Wilson, Neponset shipbuilder.

Her handling of tenders and small craft under sail is the delight of the club skippers and the envy of the searack crew.

The only child permitted to skipper a boat out of Boston Yacht Club, Betty Lou—her commodore's father—has been perched on the back of her head, her over-sized slacks snapping in the breeze—handles her craft like an expert, and her orders to "lick off on the running back."

Science Vs. Pirates' Treasure

Providence, July 20—The pot of gold that lies at the end of the rainbow is mined on the sea floor a mile off Cape Henlopen.

And it will take a week before salvaging work can resume, although the pirate sloop Brak, with its reputed $100,000 to $150,000 treasure has been found.

Hills of ocean sand, scattered by fast currents, have reburred the pirate gold under the sea fathoms.

New England salvagers, who have discovered the ship, are getting more equipment today. High pressure pumps that will force water into the cabin and slush away the sand while another sucks it out of the ship are being bought.

Charles Colcord of Attleboro and Richard T. Wilson of this city and their firm, Cape Providence associates are refitting the salvage boat Liberty for the new pumps.

Up to Courts

When the loot from the Spanish Main is brought to the surface, there will be no hurried split and quick spending.

The United States Admiralty courts will decide how much of the gold the salvagers are to have and just what portion the government will get.

Divers have brought up a piece of sailing that definitely proves they have discovered the skull and bones ship. The ship's masts and decks have long ago been swept away by the sea and the railing is the only identifying feature.

The Brak was returning to Delaware with her hold literally crammed with buccanier booty when a heavy squall hit the craft. The captain and 30 members of the crew went down with the treasure hoard.

Only nine men lived and on their story and records, men and governments for three centuries have been trying to rob the grave of the deep.

The British government financed one expedition, but the heavy mud on the sea bottom defied men unaided, with his new inventions seems ready to retrieve what the winds have hurried to the treacherous underwater mud.

LOBBY PROBERS TO DEFEAT TAX DRIVE

By Associated Press.
Washington, July 20—Lobby investigators, warned to the task of stifling activities against the administration utility bill, disclosed today that they will look into the drive against the yet unvoted Roosevelt tax measure.

The Senate lobby committee will continue next week to hear testimony concerning the fight against the clause in the utility bill calling for the abolition of "unnecessary" holding companies.

A Boston lawyer for the Associated Gas & Electric Company, William Hill, yesterday acknowledged that $700,000 spent by his company eventually would come from pockets of stockholders or consumers.

Secretary Ickes joined the case on the power fight stage with a statement that "central power" is responsible for the widely scattered legal attempts against the TVA-financed municipal power projects. He said private utility companies are making a "concerted attack."

MOVE TO BAR SUITS
Administration forces, suffering a partial setback in the attempt to bar certain suits against the government, pushed ahead with their program.

The Senate approved a compromise amendment to the AAA permitting processors to take legal action against the government for suit recovery if they prove they bore the tax burden and did not pass it on to the consumer.

The Senate Banking Committee appears almost evenly divided on the President's recommendation for legislation to prohibit suits in the gold clause cases.

The President, in a press conference, declared every other nation exercises the right of sovereignty to determine whether it will be sued.

WATCH WAD DEALS
Other amendments to the AAA were delayed by debate on the processing tax question and Senator J. Lee Robinson expects passage of the measure next week.

The Senate passed up its Saturday holiday to debate the AAA bill today. Before it was a motion to reconsider rejection of a compensation tax on rayon.

Chairman McNamara (R), North Dakota, revealed that 20 percent of the Senate munitions investigation are waiting for any sign that American munitions firms are doing business with the potential belligerents, Italy and Ethiopia.

The Senate under Stephen Reaheub also have been directed to watch for any possible American banking connections with the two nations.

President Roosevelt today was cruising on Chesapeake Bay in the government yacht Sequoia.

Showers to Cool It Off Again

More thunder showers and high winds are due tonight, the Weather Bureau warned today.

The weather played pranks for two hours in Boston today when the winds shifted to east and then back to the southwest to start the mercury rising after a sharp drop.

But the Weather Bureau promises relief with a sharp drop. The official forecast for the week-end was "generally fair and clear."

Tomorrow will be fair and the quick silver will climb.

WOMAN DIES In Leap From Liner

St. John's, N. F., July 20 (AP)—The liner Nova Scotia arrived here today from Boston with first aid half mast and her officers reported that an English woman named Adams had jumped overboard last night and drowned. They said the steamer was stopped and a fruitless search made for her body. Mrs. Adams was traveling with her four-year-old son.

Boston agents of the line said today the woman probably sailed from Halifax. No one of the name was listed among the passengers who joined the vessel at Boston.

URGES COOLIDGE Memorial Span

Washington, July 20 (AP)—A bill authorizing expenditure of $600,000 for a Calvin Coolidge memorial bridge across the Connecticut river on the highway between Northampton and Bradley, Mass., was introduced today by Senator Walsh (D Mass.).

Bandit Victim's Own Story of How He Was Shot Down

"He didn't give me a chance. He shot me in the back."

John McSorley's story of today's robbery in Rosindale was told to Leonard Dickson, who took him to the hospital, and to police.

"This is my vivid account of his desperate but futile effort to save the $500 payoff he was carrying."

"The two men got in the car and I stepped out of the car and walked to the steps which were right nearby."

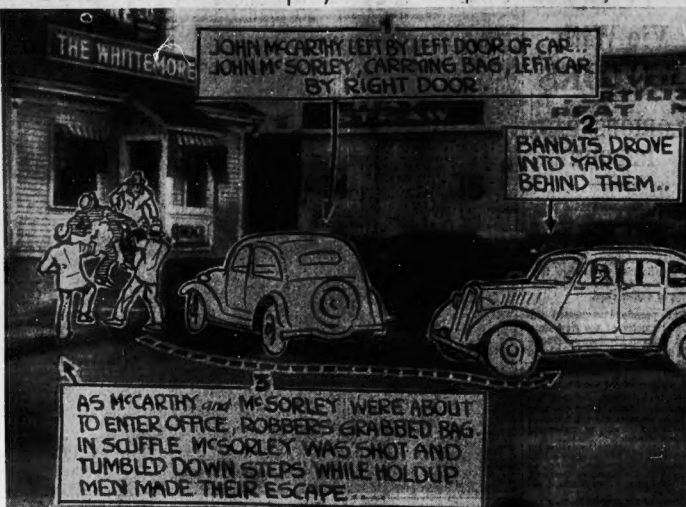

"The big fellow pointed his gun at me and said: 'Put up your hands! Give us the dough!'"

"I never dreamed of obeying him."

"I said, 'I haven't got it, I haven't got it!'"

"He snatched his mouth and

Bandit Trio Shoot Employee and Escape With Payroll

Philips, and working with precision, three gunman shot and critically wounded John McSorley, 33, of Appleton street, Malden, on Harrison street, Rosindale, today, and escaped with a $700 payroll. The holdup took place outside of the offices of the Whitmore Co., where McSorley is employed. Diagram shows the location of the holdup and where the bandits waited in an auto for McSorley to step out of his car.

McSorley was given 10 years and McSorley was hailed as a hero by Judge Thomas J. Hammond.

McSorley told the Boston Evening American what happened today. He said:

"John McSorley and I drove to the First National Bank in Rosindale to get the payroll. I was driving the car with $500.00 for the payroll."

"I drove back to Harrison street by the usual route. I drove right up alongside the car which was waiting for me. The green car had come into Harrison street behind us but neither of us had noticed it. Then things happened like lightning."

"I got out on the driver's side and John got out the other side, on to the steps."

"Two men flashed past me. One was a nickel-plated revolver on which the sun gleamed. The other man had a gun and I think it was an automatic."

FOUNDS ON CASH

"At almost the same moment I heard John cry: 'No, no! I haven't got it!'"

"He started to run up the steps. A shot was fired. I came around the front of the car and saw John fall on the steps and grab his hip."

"As he fell he threw the bag as far as he could."

"But the big gunman pounced on the bag like a fish. They darted around the rear of my car. The green coupe had turned round. They jumped in and were off."

"Leonard Dickson and Jimmy Ryan came out of the yard and hurled bricks at the machine. I think they broke a window. The robbers fired back but the shot went wild."

"Then John Ronegan came running out of the office with two guns and jumped in a car and gave chase."

BANDIT DESCRIBED

"The big gunman who had the shiny gun looked like a foreigner or else he was well tanned by the sun."

"He was about 30 years old, 5 feet 11 and weighed 180 to 200 pounds. He wore a white shirt and dark pants and no hat or coat."

"Ronegan, who lives in Baile street, Rosindale, followed the bandit with the help of children who had seen it. Some of the children said the men brandished guns."

"It apparently went into Fifth street, crossed the Washington street and Cummings highway. Ronegan never caught sight of it."

"Dickson took McSorley to the hospital."

"The whole robbery was witnessed

Welch, Internal Revenue Collector, or any official of his office from collecting protestants taxes totalling $30,000.00 from the Pilgrim Mill manufacturing and sellers of cotton, until the legality of the AAA act in that regard is established by the United States Supreme Court.

Bottle Pups See World

By Associated Press.
Portland, Me., July 20—Fourteen thoroughbred puppy pups, not too fond of travel, were enroute today from Deer Isle, Me., to Baltimore, Md., after a nap and a bottle in a auto here.

Originally there were 15, born ten days ago in one litter to the late black French puppy owned by Dr. and Mrs. Leo Brady of Baltimore, who have been at Deer Isle. One was given away before the Brady started.

SENATE DOWNS TAX ON RAYON

By Associated Press.
Washington, July 20—The Senate today overwhelmingly reaffirmed its decision against imposing a compensatory tax on rayon by rejecting 65 to 15 a motion to reconsider the question.

Opponents of the rayon tax had denounced it variously as "unjust" and as a "surrender to the silk industry." Senator Wagner (D) New York, argued that silk is a stronger competitor to rayon than rayon is to cotton.

Senator Russell (D) Georgia, made the motion to reconsider the vote by which the Senate Thursday rejected the AAA amendment applying a tax on rayon equal to 125 per cent of the prevailing tax on cotton.

The Congress has gone to recess in looking after the cotton growers," said Senator Glass (D, Va.) during further debate on the proposal.

He said one rayon factory alone in Virginia employed 500 persons, which meant that 20,000 people were dependent upon it, "and yet the Senate without one word of hearing precipitates this proposition to tax out of existence this industry that is yet in its infancy."

Beverly Farms Benefit for Church Fund

By BETTY ALDEN

TRUTH IS STRANGER than fiction, they say, and though it wouldn't seem possible, the S. S. Door-man-die will dock in the yard of St. John's Church in Beverly Farms on Thursday, August 1.

Nautically-minded North Shoreites are to have but one day to indulge in the pleasures and caprices of this grandiose show boat. . . . One thing is certain, however, and that is that young and old can cross the gangplank and enjoy the various amusements to the full, without having the least fear of sea-sickness, for as yet no one has noted either a puke or a roll on the smooth surface of the churchyard lawn. . . .

"Ship" Officers

OF COURSE THE DOOR-MAN-DIE isn't honest-to-goodness boat, but just a special sort of holiday steamer which the enterprising women of St. John's Church are planning to build for their annual fair. . . . On its decks there will be special programs of games and amusements for children, a band to furnish music all day, a Lido cafe where one may have luncheon or tea, a flower booth, book table, rummage sale and all the other familiar characteristics of a real church fair. . . .

The special officers of this good ship include the Rev. Mr. Bradford B. Burnham, rector of the church, Mrs. William H. Coolidge, Mrs. William Endicott Dexter, Miss Eleanor Fabryan, Mrs. W. R. Phillips, Mrs. Alvin F. Scott, and Miss Alice Thorndike, captain. . . .

Every year the members of the Junior League stage a campaign to donate to the use of sailors, to help defray the annul of a wear-out-off-watch in some distant ocean. . . . So, true to their Junior League training, the committee for the fair are collecting all sorts of books, some of which may be purchased by the various wayward seafaring men (and women) who attend the fair, or we should say, climb upon the salty decks of the good old Door-man-die. . . . Mrs. Lyon Weyburn is piloting the crew of book collectors. . . .

Busy With Rummage Sale Plans

OTHER MEMBERS OF THE Door-man-die crew, led by Mrs. John B. Thomas and Mrs. William Endicott Dexter, are emulating the North Shore forays of the piratical Captain Kidd. . . . They are not denuding the inhabitants of food and clothing, but are merely collecting all sorts of odd and interesting things to sell at their rummage sale. . . . They aver, but without the swashbuckling and cutlass clanking, that their collection will be the most interesting since the days of the pirates' trove. . . .

Of course good hostesses realize that a tough sea dog must eat, so they have arranged to have a Lido cafe on the ship. . . . Here, Mrs. J. A. Lowell Blake and her assistants, including Mrs. L. Cushing Goodhue, will dispense tempting luncheon and tea-time viands and an orchestra will play nautical music. . . . Barbara Stevens and Oliver Simpkins will be balloon and cigarette vendors. . . . Mrs. Bayard Warren and her two eldest daughters, Lily and Camilla, will be in charge of a program of games and sports for children. . . . Mrs. Nathaniel Simpkins, Jr., is to be chairman of the flower table. . . . A large crew of girls and boys of the North Shore recruited to assist with the sales and games on this auspicious day. . . .

Parker-Hinckley Ceremony

FOLLOWING THEIR MARRIAGE today in St. James' Episcopal Church in Proulx's Neck, Maine, Peggy Hinckley and her new husband, Henry McBurney Parker, will sail for a European honeymoon before returning to make their home in Brookline. . . .

George A. Trowbridge of New York, officiated at the ceremony and Mr. Hinckley escorted his daughter to the altar. . . .

Surrounding the bride as she pledged her marriage vows were Miss Carol Hinman of West Orange, N. J., as maid of honor; Miss Barbara Reynolds, president of the Vincent Club; Mrs. Albert P. Hinckley of Bedford Hills, N. Y.; Miss Jane McGraw; Mrs. C. Campbell Patterson, Jr.; Miss Eleanor McClurg, the bride's step-sister; Miss Eleanor Fairfield, and a niece of the bride; Miss Margaret Roberts Hinckley as flower girl. . . . Barbara Ogden McClurg and Nancy Parker King, were the ring bearers. . . .

Junior Leaguer and Vincent Club Member

AMORY COOLIDGE, son of Mr. T. Jefferson Coolidge of Boston and Manchester, was the best man for Mr. Parker, and the large usher corps included Dr. Frederic Parker, Jr., John S. Parker, Henry P. King, Jr., Harold W. Pierce, Francis Brooks, Edward S. Brewer, Winslow B. Pelton, William F. Prescott, Albert P. Hinckley, J. Holliday Philbin of Hewitt, L. I., and William Amory Parker. . . .

The bride is one of the most active members of the Junior League and Vincent Club and a graduate of Smith College. . . . Mr. Parker was graduated from Harvard in 1925 and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Parker of Charles street and Nahant. . . . The newlyweds will be at home at 210 Willard road, Brookline, after the first of September. . . .

Harmonizing Make-Up

Exciting New Sets Offer
Simple Way of Choosing
Perfect Blends

By The Beauty Editor

IF YOUR COMPLEXION, which has been your pride and joy for years, suddenly strikes you as revolting, it's time to cast an eye over the merits of beauty.

If the idea of toying with harmonizing make-up proves too much for your mind to battle with these days, trek to the cosmetic counter of a downtown department store where it is all thought out for you.

Just as a hat or a pair of shoes will look most becoming with certain frocks and unattractive with others—powder, lipstick and rouge must harmonize if make-up is to accomplish the purpose for which it is intended.

A world-famous cosmetic house has solved this problem once and for all by presenting to Boston a new design for beauty and living—called matched make-up.

If you have spent many unhappy hours in the past experimenting with various shades in the hope that eventually you would stumble upon the happy combination that would do you justice, here's cheerful, welcome news.

Quick as a wink you can now select all your make-up accessories—foundation lotion, cream, powder and lipstick. The enterprise, however, is to put up this idea have worked through the entire scale with color charts and materials so that the result is as sure as anything you mix on a palette.

For instance, if you are the type with brown or red-gold hair and warm complexion tones, rust set in your shade. You simply use all the russet make-up accessories. If yours is the dark, exotic kind with jet-black hair and fair complexion, you will choose the Castilian blend.

For those who are fragile, Dresden-china coloring who have refused to be martyrs to the sun, there is a matched "Champagne" make-up. Those "in between" ers," neither strictly blonde or otherwise, will go slightly mad over the flatteringly Paris blend. If you are a finicky person and must have your own particular shade, you will find one to exactly suit your taste among this set of matched make-up. You can purchase a trial package of each of these five sets and a small box at one dollar.

To obtain the names of these matched make-up sets and the store where they are sold, write Juliet Shelby, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Question: I am a girl of 16 and have a scar on the right side of my face. This scar was caused by a burn I would like to know the name of the cream which you use recently which would help to remove the scar. Is there any kind of mark. My arms are also badly scarred as a result of burns, and I would like something to remove the scars. Is there any kind of cream for this purpose? JANE F. Lexington.

Answer: The only method of removing deep scars caused by burns is by surgery. This method is expensive, of course, but it can afford it I would certainly advise your seeing a surgeon.

LAUGHING softly to himself Spanish Maine took up the telephone that stood in the corner of his sitting-room.

"Brandon Abbas?"

"Yes, sir."

"Who's speaking?"

"The butler at Brandon Abbas, sir."

"Oh, will you say that Mr. Manoel Manoel would like to speak to Miss Vanbrugh?"

"Miss Vanbrugh is out driving with Mr. Geste, Sir. Geste is to be back at ten o'clock."

"Oh—quite certain?"

"Yes, sir; quite certain. Miss Vanbrugh and Mr. Geste will be returning to lunch, sir."

"Oh, well, when Miss Vanbrugh comes in will you tell her that Mr. Manoel rang up, and that he will be in at ten o'clock?"

"Yes, sir," said John, where he is standing?"

these unfortunate people? Really, if it were only a case of Spanish Maine and what he could do, he'd be inclined to go and kill him himself.

But, as a matter of simple and sober fact, if Spanish Maine were to come, the situation between Consuela and Harry Vane would remain the same—and he would his own duty in the matter.

Plans Conference

STILL, Spanish Maine must be eliminated.

And how could he be eliminated, unless he were to be snatched from a talk between himself and Spanish Maine? No, only money talks—to a creature like that. Still, no harm could be done, surely, by a sort of Round Table Conference, especially if all cards were laid on the table.

He turned to where his friend sat, tense, concentrated, frowning, angrily chewing the end of the cigar that he was smoking.

"I say, John," said Vanbrugh, "since the gentleman has come into the immediate neighborhood, doesn't it seem inhospitable not to invite him here?"

"What?"

"I mean it, John; treat him as an ordinary guest; say only money talks—to a creature like that. Still, no harm could be done, surely, by a sort of Round Table Conference, especially if all cards were laid on the table."

ANNOUNCE
MARRIAGE
Yourself

By MRS. BECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beckman: My girl friend is to be married very soon. Her parents are living in Europe, and she is living here with the youngest sister, whose daughter is to be maid-of-honor.

She also has an older sister living here. Who should have the wedding announcements printed, and how should they be worded?

Under the circumstances, it would be best for your friend to make her own marriage announcement. Like this:

Miss Mary Jane Haven and Mr. Anthony Vane have announced their marriage on Tuesday.

The first of September, Nineteen hundred and thirty-three, Hartford, Connecticut.

ADVICE on LOVE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX and NELL BRINKLEY

New Interests Will Divert A Wife's Nagging Tendencies

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX
DO WOMEN NAG without realizing they are nagging?

A man who has achieved distinction in national affairs asked for a legal separation from his wife the other day, and gave as the cause her constant nagging.

The lady, he said, would nag him sometimes all night, so that he got no sleep and was unfit for his work the next day. She was asked her side of the case and—can you beat it—said she was forced to attend to many parties and have what other women would regard as a glorious time. Her husband's position demanded that she should entertain, sit at the head of his table, represent him, she didn't want to represent him; she wanted to represent herself.

She hated the stammer, stammer and general clashing of cymbals that went with the sort of life she was expected to lead. She loved the way things went when they lived back home in a small town in the Middle West, where she was head of the Women's Club, read papers before the Literary Society and was an officer in the Dorcas Society. She enjoyed cutting and making garments for the poor more than playing bridge with the wives of other successful men in that city.

Two Pictures, of Great Beauty

IN THESE two Nell Brinkley pictures two little epics, having about their essence right through their victims, cheerfully contemplate the happy result.

The picture on the right shows love in its fulfillment, that of a mother for the child, after Cupid's usual, and necessary work has resulted in marriage, and marriage has resulted in the happiness of maturity.

Millions of young boys and girls, fortunately, know the happiness, indescribable, unlimited, that is shown in Miss Brinkley's picture of the fair-haired girl on the left. There you see love in its first stages—the happy beginning.

Only a mother can know the much greater happiness possessed by the dark-haired young mother on the right.

So, once more, I ask: "Why don't you get married?" BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

RON SOBS OUT SUSPICIONS TO MADGE

CHAPTER 600

"BLESS ALL my wife's relations!" Dicky ejaculated, staring at the door through which Ronald's little figure had just departed. "What ails that boy?"

But I had seen what Dicky had not, the working of Ronald's boyish face, the tears that filled his eyes, and I spoke softly.

"He was on the point of bursting into sobs, Dicky, and of course, he couldn't bear for us to see him."

"What of course not, poor devil!" Dicky agreed compassionately. "I suppose that's because I gave him a slap on the back of his head."

"That's just what it was," Lillian asserted passionately, "a coat of whitewash. I feel terribly sorry for Ronald, of course, but you can't convince me Sam Brinton isn't a scoundrel. I can feel it in my bones."

"BRINTON RETURNS"

"All right," Dicky agreed, lifting a cautionary forefinger, "but don't broadcast it. The object of your suspicions is probably on the stairs at this moment upon the way to his room."

"Thank you for reminding me, Dicky," Lillian said with something that, in her passion for meanness, "Helena thinks it's a wonderful idea. He said, 'She wants me to thank you. If she doesn't get a chance to see you without Mrs. Fairfax being present, and she wants me to tell you that she's both here at any hour you wish. When do you want me?'"

"No," there was a note of sharpness in Lillian's voice. "Harry and I are going to do that on Friday night."

"LIBRARY SANCTUARY"

"Then we can bring Ronald and Bob down from New Haven, and they'll be fine," Lillian said, cordially. "Bring them down Friday night, then."

Mrs. Culbertson on Bridge

Centuries of Experience

Centuries of experience have developed for Bridge players a method for playing certain combinations of cards acknowledged to be correct.

The experienced player, when declarer, knows what cards to play from dummy to the opening lead, without having to analyze each separate situation that may arise when he is playing the hand.

The inexperienced player should attempt to learn from the many fine books which have been written on Bridge, the secrets of all the cases in which there is one, and only one, way of handling these types of suit holdings.

The following deal illustrates a not uncommon situation, which the beginner will be prone to misplay unless he be very careful.

Neither side vulnerable.

North Deal.

South is not quite strong enough for a free bid of one no-trump, though he could easily have bid one no-trump if East had passed.

North's club suit is not, strictly speaking, rebiddable, but he can allow East to take the lead at one heart, and perhaps make a partner.

North was not too well equipped with a weak trump bid, after South had passed previously, but with strength in all four suits North decided it would be worth while to gamble on making this one additional trick for game.

West overbid his five-card diamond suit, but decided not to open it because he had no side entry with which to get the lead later in case the diamonds should become established.

West therefore opened the 10 of hearts.

The good Bridge player shows exactly what to do with the combination of cards held by South and North in hearts.

South with which a low card is played from dummy, East will win the King.

South's Queen and nine will capture West's ten, and East's Jack. In this case, since

Home Method Making Debut

COMPETE with Rodier and Bianchini in your own home!

Weave woolen fabrics of such artistry that they may be used in creations netting from three to five hundred dollars in the retail market!

Perhaps that's a bit high-faloot, though quite possible, because it has already been done by the New England yarn manufacturers who have perfected and are sponsoring a home-weaving method.

The whole thing is a natural outgrowth of the widespread interest in knitting and a further aid to the need for doing things by hand, because people who do not know how to do it are not to knit will undoubtedly go on the deep and about hand loom weaving. And, if you think a little you will recall the beauty of expression any painting or print of fabrics has been conveyed... perhaps this is one answer to the problem of machine modern living.

However, that rarefied sort of idea will not be first with any fashion-minded female who looks at samples of fabrics made by this new method.

She will think in terms of the smartest suit the Century Club ladies have ever seen... or the original and striking draperies, with matching antimacassars and lamp runners, her living room will boast. And she will be exactly right, because the fabrics are something so to a little more about, with their shadings of color, their designs and mixtures of yarns (anything that can be knit can be loomed).

A yard a day is the average output. When the fabric is finished, it may be cut without loss of revealing. And it can cost as little as a dollar or two a yard, up as high as you care to go. There already is a market, and a demand that is not even tentatively satisfied yet. And, if you get really serious about it you can always buy a power loom and turn out materials that will be real competition for Scotch and French weavers.

Like all good things, and a pleasure in itself, it has far-reaching ways that have already begun to spread. One is the profession of teacher that it will develop. About a year's study is required for sufficient perfection of technique to teach. However, the average home weaver can turn out fine pieces of work on less than a month's study. You'll be hearing more about all this in a few weeks!

Cooked, fresh meat will keep at least a week in a mechanical refrigerator, and more as long in a good box.

Be sure to keep perfectly for two weeks or longer. Its chief form of deterioration is the drying that takes place if you don't keep it carefully wrapped in waxed paper, and put into a cool place. It is one of the best ways of keeping meat for a long time.

Serve MEATS IN SALAD Form

By MARTHA LEE

EVERY SUMMER brings a flood of inquiries about how long food may be kept with safety.

Meats get more than their share of these anxious queries because the general public has been made so thoroughly conscious of the harmful effect of spoilage and nearly everyone knows that meat is one of the perishable foods.

Fresh, raw meat is a perishable product, and hungry little scavengers called bacteria find it such an easy job to multiply on it that they develop more quickly in it than on a food like lettuce or cheese.

Fortunately, however, the most always develops a very unpleasant odor when any quillies are present, so if your nose is normal you'll have no trouble detecting that condition.

Any of the cured or smoked meats, such as ham, corned beef, the smoked sausages, dried beef, or similar, which are so plentiful in their preparation have been treated with smoke or heavy salt, sugar or spices, which are so effective in their preservation that they are safe to eat for several days.

Modern home refrigerators have made all meat, even raw meat, extremely easy to keep over long periods. Fresh, raw meat, when properly stored, will keep for more than the pre-war period of a few days.

When you want to keep meat for a long time, wrap it in waxed paper to prevent drying. If you want to keep them still longer, wrap and put into the freezing unit. Frozen meats will keep for a few weeks!

THRILLS AND CHILLS HOLD SWAY AT OLD ORCHARD BEACH

HAPPY LAND-ING!—There's no telling just where this enthusiastic young lady will land, with these huskies doing the towing. It's heave ho and away you go into the chill waters at Old Orchard Beach, where thrills and chills hold sway the whole long day.

GIDDYUP!—If it's a tan you're looking for, just ask any one of these mermaids how to acquire it. Leading the parade of fair jockeys is Audrey Reid, followed by Frankie O'Brien, Muriel Larmann, Norah Comber, Marjorie Mott and Nancy Reid. Sorry boys, we haven't got their telephone numbers.

Unlike the "softies" who gradually wade into the water, they make a bee-line dash for the deeper spots. Watch out there, cameraman, you're in for a drenching unless you move quickly.

EVERY DOGGIE HAS HIS DAY!—It's in and out again "Buster." But Master Mahlon L. Larry says it's time to rest up. "You've had enough exercise for one day," says Larry. "Now, just take it easy, we'll be back tomorrow." Please note that three-year-old Larry isn't letting Old Sol play havoc with his tender skin although his tan is the envy of the rest of the bathers. DAVE WILSON PICKS 6 WINNERS IN ROW AT SUFFOLK DOWNS

Handicap King Hits Stride

Six winners in a row!
For Dave Wilson, Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser as handicapper.

Wilson made his sensational showing at Suffolk Downs yesterday. He missed out in picking the winner of the first race, and then swept the card. Six winners in a row!

It was a field day for New England's greatest handicapper.

Mannerly, the Wilson choice in the third race, paid $51.40 to win. The place price was $19.20 and $9.40 to show.

Dave got off to a fair

The first in a long string of victories for Wilson, Paper Profits winning second race.

starts when Lieut. Greenock, his second choice, won the race and Mottled the third selection, showed as figured. The second started Dave on his great streak. Paper Profits which Dave liked next to Ramus, who was scratched, came home and paid the fair price of $7.40. Gifted Lady, the second choice, ran third.

Mannerly crashed through and returned $51.40, $19.20 and $9.40 for the best price ever paid by any horse named by a graded handicapper in this city.

Social Climber was the best on form, figured Dave, and the horse responded nobly and gave its backers one and a half to one.

Phidias was his best of the day—Phidias was. The nag came in and paid $8.60 for a $2 ticket.

The sixth race hit another high spot as Dave's Feed Box Special, Bold Lover, came through to collect its oats and give its supporters $7.40. Incidentally, Palma, his third best, Dave said might take it all, came in second and paid $10.00 to place and $6.00 to show.

A great day was topped off with win and show selections hit right on the schnecks in the seventh. Four Spot came in and paid almost seven to one, returning $15.60. Greylady ran third.

Wilson is the "tops" and yesterday proved it once more.

A parlay would have paid—but why make us dizzy? It's too hot anyway.

Just to make it as all around winning day for the Boston Evening American handicappers, Sam Cohen picked seven greyhound winners on the 10-race card at Wonderland Park, Revere.

The best former mark for dog race selectors was four winners. The seven-race streak marked an unusual event, for dogs are considered much more difficult to grade than horses.

AUSTEN LAKE

The Unmasking of Masked Gal; Suffolk's Foot Slips

THERE IS A SWEETLY succulent question of horse-race ethics involved in the disqualification of Masked Gal in Thursday's first race at Suffolk Downs, which is causing the track proprietors some very red cheeks.

Because through an error of the track handicapper who matches and certifies all entries, Masked Gal was not eligible to run in the field limited to two-year-olds which had not won more than two previous races.

By the performance chart it was plain that Masked Gal had won three earlier races, including one on the opening day at Suffolk Downs, one on May 24 at Rockingham and another on May 22 at the same oval.

But the Suffolk stewards did not discover their mistake until the customers were home and the silvery moon was high in the sky. By that time, of course, the payoff sky had been made on Masked Gal and the lucky people had the cash folded in their wallets.

Winners Are Weepers

WHAT DID THE TRACK OFFICIALS do when they discovered their error? Why, they blushed a tomato red, of course, and then issued a manifesto saying that Masked Gal had been disqualified and that the official winner would be typed in the records as Argoson, which had finished second.

And they mumbled something in their beards about the $1000 purse being slashed back from Harry Neusteter, Masked Gal's owner, and issued to H. F. Mitchell, owner of Argoson. But they added there would be no payoff to the people who had bought win tickets on Argoson, since there had already been a payoff, both in the race and the daily double, on Masked Gal. If the Argosons could catch the Masked Gal backers and induce them to shed their $1000 winning, all right. But they couldn't expect the track to go down in its own britches and scoop out another $41,000 just to make everybody happy.

So here is a case where the bettors were paid off on a disqualified dog, and backers of the official winner, like Mother Hubbard's nursery dog, did not even get a bone.

Since there was $21,701 involved in the race pool and another $19,798 in the daily double, the question is of some moment.

There is a Law for It

SINCE HORSE RACING was lifted out of sin by public referendum last November and therefore is a matter of state law, it would seem that the Argoson backers, by taking the matter to court, could get a judgment against the track based on the evidence that Masked Gal was unqualified for the race from the barrier bell and therefore running as a finger, and that the track officials recognized the error by belated disqualification.

But it seems that betting money is not real money, but only make-believe money like cigar coupons and store stamps, and therefore has no civil standing. Because there is a statute cunningly woven into the race bill, which makes the rulings of the track stewards irrevocable.

And, of course, most of the Argoson investors, both buyers of straight tickets and those who had doubled the horse with its. Louie in the third race, have torn up their colored receipts or scattered them on the ground. So that the bulk of the evidence by this time in the incinerator, or possession of the track jacks who sweep up the clutter.

Yet I know of a dozen bettors who are still hugging their Argoson stubs, in the loving trust that a benevolent Providence will shower down.

Embarrassing the Bookies

THE BOOKMAKERS, who in their cave of the winds hide out around the city, have been paying off on Masked Gal according to track precedent, are being stormed by irate Argoson customers, demanding their share of Christmas candy. Being impatient people where a dollar is concerned, the arguments are achieving the heat and fury of the World War.

Of course, the Bookies operate in defiance of the law and therefore are protected by an absence of official control. So that the best the bettors can do is gnaw their own cuffs or stamp up and down while yelling over their heads.

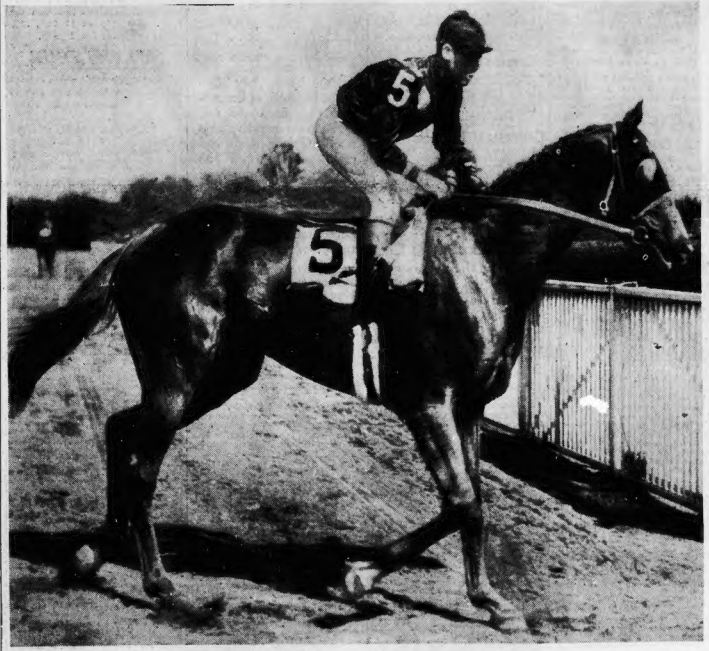

The Bookies say that they would much rather have paid off

Boston's Largest Racing Crowd Jam Park Early

By WALTER KILEY

Boston's biggest race crowd in history, estimated at close to 50,000, thronged Suffolk Downs this afternoon, lured in large part by the opportunity to see Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's star, Discovery, match strides with a field of the fleetest racers of the country.

A steady stream of early arrivals formed in a series of lines in front of the daily double windows.

Additional thousands were pouring in long after the opening races so that officials were confidently expecting to handle one of New England's record turnouts for a thoroughbred horse racing program.

The daily double figures were hung up when the windows closed at two o'clock sharp with a total of $23,228 having passed over the sill.

The opening race mutuels handle gave an indication of the extent to which the day's total would reach when $41,683 was wagered on a new high for the opening event at Suffolk Downs.

Danno Starts Training

By JACK CORWAY

SPEAKING OF news: Danno O'Mahoney is back in town. Ready to start training tomorrow at Manson Inn, Wayland, for his world's championship mat bout with Ed Don George at Braves Field a week from Tuesday night.

Jack McGrath, the Irishman's manager, was to go into a huddle today with Paul Bowser, promoter of the bout, and Frank Delamater, Danno's representative, in an effort to pick a referee for the championship fight.

George has handed Sam Jones and Ted Tommerman. He says he gave the horses to O'Mahoney.

Since defeating Louie Danno has upset Chas. Little and Jim Brown.

He does not believe George can beat him.

Freddy Moran will have charge of O'Mahoney's training at the Manson Inn camp.

It is expected that 10,000 persons will turn out to see Danno get a peek at the sensational Irishman. There is not any admission charge at Danno's camp.

VANDERBILT

ALFRED Gervase Vanderbilt told Judge Frank J. Ryan he would scratch one of his three horses in today's big race at Suffolk Downs, but NOT Discovery.

He did this in help make the race more interesting to the spectators and to the horsemen.

There was a twinkle in young Vanderbilt's eye when he told Judge Ryan he would like to send Discovery against Amray and Omaha in a special race at Suffolk Downs. Vanderbilt enjoys real competition.

Vanderbilt told me he got a great thrill when he won two of the three big stakes last Saturday.

"I would have won at Chicago, too," he said, "only they have run side on one of the turns after getting off to a good start. Discovery and Gulliver, I have, however, won at New York and at Suffolk Downs."

Vanderbilt is quiet and unassuming, and very popular with the fans around the race track.

"I live to Boston in a little more than an hour," young Vanderbilt said, "and my race track is very handy to the race track. I live like flying ants as much as I do racing horses."

Time supply will be at its best if the track is fast. At Narragansett it was a Time Supply finished third to Dark Hope. It threw a shoe, and one of the nails remained in its hoof, causing injury.

WILSON'S DAY

PAVE WILSON had a field day at Suffolk Downs on Friday when he picked six winners. He was quite happy when Mannerly won the third race to pay $51.40, as he had a win ticket on his own selection. I find that many of our best handicappers get touted off their own selection.

Lefty Gervase will probably lead the Tigers in the Sunday game at Fenway Park. The Sox have experienced their troubles since Mickey Cochrane's team came to town. The Tigers are set to spring into the lead any time the Yankees leave.

Joe McCarthy has kept the Yankees in a fine mental state. McCarthy knows baseball and is able to get everything possible out of his players.

I saw Russ Murray, who recently completed a successful dog race meeting at Roswell, N. H., racing at Suffolk Downs. Russ had a first class job managing the Roswell track, and did much to win new friends for dog racing.

Eddie Mac, publicity director of Rockingham Park, has also been at Suffolk Downs racing. The Sox have a new eye to business. Ames keeps reminding everybody that the Sox are the Sox. Ames will be back in the racing picture on August 12.

Omaha, who is to race at Chicago today, will appear in the Narragansett Special.

Babich held the Cards to five scattered hits while the Dodgers picked up Bill Walker and Phil Cline for nine.

Danno O'Mahoney taking a short rest while training for his big match against Ed Don George for the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser Christmas Fund Show at Braves Field, July 30. Danno is shown holding a Mexican Chihuahua, one of the smallest dogs in the world. Ed Don George will furnish more opposition, but Danno expects to handle him.

Low Scoring In St. Paul Golf Tilt

By Associated Press

St. Paul, July 20.—Par, hallmark of perfection in golf, was worth about as much as last year's reputation in the $200 St. Paul open championship today.

As the field, a record breaker for class and numbers, stepped out in pursuit of Ray Manzoni of Los Angeles, in the second round of the 72 hole championship battle, the scoring pace was so fast over the perfectly conditioned Keller golf course that the first 100 players had a 14th place in 14 minutes.

Manzoni, armed with a red-hot putter that he used only 28 times, routed par by five blows on his first-round four yesterday, but all he had with his 57 was a one-stroke lead.

Fourth-round Harry Cooper and Paul Walsh of Chicago, and Bill Kalow, Louisville pro, had 68.

Low Scoring

The field, generally, was on a high hunt for the first 54 holes. The first 72 of the original 165 starters were parked within 10 strokes.

The other par busters were Ky Laffoon, Chicago, 68; Henry Picard, Kansas City, and Pat Sawyer, Minneapolis amateur, 69; and a trio of 71 shooters from Chicago—Tom Arnold, Eddie Low, and Horton Smith, and Joe Brown Des Moines.

Donald Budge Whips Teuton

DROPS ONE SET

Wimbledon, Eng., July 20 (AP)—Donald Budge, California redhead, registered the first triumph for the United States in the inter-zone Davis Cup tennis series with Germany today by overcoming Heiner Henkel, youthful Teuton, in a four-set contest.

The scores were 7-5, 11-9, 6-8, 6-1.

Budge, showing the effects of an over-night touch of illness and obviously feeling the strain of his Davis Cup debut on foreign turf, nevertheless finished strong as he polished off his German rival in the fourth set.

Both were highly erratic during most of the match. Two dozen service breaks were scored.

The 19-year-old American's victory gave the United States a flying start in its bid to qualify for the challenge round against England, although Baron Gottfried Von Cramon, the German star, was ordered to square accounts in the day's second match, against Wilmer Allison, veteran Texan.

A hard rain started in full a few minutes after the opening match and workmen quickly spread the tarpaulin over the center court. The weather threatened to delay the second singles battle indefinitely.

JACK ORR

Sets New Mark

Toronto, July 20 (INS)—A new record of 2:55.7 for the fastest mile ever paced on a Canadian track was set by Jack Orr today after Jack Orr, owned by Gibson White of Lexington, Ky., and driven by Tom Berry, won the $500 Wilbur Farm Stake for two-year-old pacers in two straight heats in the feature event of the second day of the Grand Circuit here. Orr, who is listed second in both heats while his leadership and Markway were third place.

CAVE MAN GETS FROM COHEN AT REVERE

Alderson's Champ Has Edge on Field IN WONDERLAND 8TH

By Sam Cohen

Cave Man, a corking second to Easter John on Thursday night, should walk away with the feature race at Wonderland Park tonight.

Meeting much less opposition than usual, every pole should be a winning one for this Alderson champion.

Red Whisk, champion in Florida last year, and Touchdown, owned by Dennis Allen, are both dangerous and a good effort by either will force Cave Man to step up his best to snatch the front end of the purse.

Soviet Farmers Steal to Live---Beal

By FRED E. BEAL

Once Fred E. Beal was a "100 per cent Communist." He was an official of radical textile workers' unions and was Communist party organizer in America.

A native of Lawrence, he led the Communist element in big textile strikes in that city and in others. Then Beal, a fugitive from justice in America, fled to Russia. Today having learned his lesson, he details more of his experiences in Soviet Russia.

ARTICLE TWELVE

My friend Maxim and I continued our journey through the Ukrainian countryside, and wandered around a village on the way to the Stalin commune which was our destination. In the backyard garden of one of the thatched houses we found two boys of about fourteen. Here the vegetables looked healthy, compared with the sickly products in the fields.

One of the boys was hale and strong, as if the earth had given him the best it had. The other looked starved and listless. We asked the healthy one:

"Is this your garden?"

"Yes, and my father's."

"Where is your father and the other people of this collective?"

"They are out stealing tomatoes!"

The straight-outness of this answer amazed me. Maxim said it was because I was a foreigner. "They hadn't the fear of foreigners."

"Aren't your father and the other people afraid of being arrested for stealing tomatoes, and can't you get them from the collective?"

"We'll die if we don't get the tomatoes, and we can't get them from the collective. We have no flour or anything except what comes from these gardens. The government took all our food."

Sees Mother Die in Field

The listless boy said he came with his mother from a long way off, he didn't know where. His mother had died in a field near this collective and the father of the healthy one took him into his home. The starving had some vague recollections of his father fighting soldiers.

We gave the lads a few lumps of sugar, a luxury in these parts, and went on in the direction of the Stalin commune, advertised as one of the highest Communist achievements.

Mile after mile we walked through uncultivated ground. Maxim said it hadn't been cultivated for over two years. As far as the eye could see, the land was barren save for weeds. At other times, I saw similar vast stretches of idle ground. Yet at this very time the "Moscow News" was telling Americans that Ukraine was 100 per cent cultivated!

Near a brook, we came upon the decomposed body of a man. Flies, ants and worms were feeding on his remains. We had seen numerous fresh graves marked with crude Greek crosses pushed into the earth, and skeletons of horses and cows.

Another hour's walk, and we came to a wheat field, or I should say a weed and wheat field. Maxim pulled at the wheat and showed me a few undeveloped kernels.

"The wheat is sick, the weeds are thriving."

At last, we came upon two humans plowing a field with a tractor. A real tractor it was running, too. A young man, the driver, was cursing an older man for not being able to hold down the plow.

"You're not digging deep enough," said Maxim.

"It's the fault of this old bag of bones!" complained the young man.

The older one, who was doing his best to bear down on the plow, got somewhat excited. He must have thought we were government officials.

"Citizens, I'm doing my best, but I don't know this thing!" He said, and pointed to the plow. "If they would give me a 'sotka' (wooden plow) I'd show them."

We went on to a small group of houses, passing in the field an abandoned John Deere combine of late model. It was rusted and out of order.

Workers Move Like Robots

The group of houses was the Stalin commune. Inside the largest of these was a row of cots. Each cot, made up, was covered with a single gray blanket. The place was empty except for the cook and a helper in the kitchen making soup. The workers of the commune would be back from the fields in half an hour, said the cook. We could meet them. We waited ourselves.

Now, at the "Red Star" commune, of the G. P. U., the workers had come rushing in from work, happy, full of life and energy. But not these men and women. They dragged themselves in tired, hungry and completely exhausted.

A dirty-aproned kitchen girl brought in a trayful of bowls of soup. Hundreds of flies followed her as she deposited each bowl, with a slice of bread, in front of each worker. The soup course was followed by hot tea, without sugar.

They were mostly young people, thin and gaunt. They stared at Maxim and me in silent amazement. I thought, at our presence. The manager came in and sent them back to the fields again. He asked us what we wanted and gave us permission to come there.

Workers Flee Model Farm

I showed him my special documents and told him I was a political refugee. He became more obliging. I asked why conditions were so bad on the commune. He didn't agree that they were bad.

"We are much better off here than on the collective," he said.

He had been manager of the commune only a short time. The previous manager had been "removed" for inefficiency. Many of the workers had run away, too.

"Why did they run away," I asked.

"Because they would rather work in the factories,"

"But we don't give them work at the factories! We have enough workers in our factory!" I protested.

"Comrades, that is my answer!"

We left him and talked with a barefoot girl, who struggled behind those walking through the field.

"Why do they run away from here?" I repeated the question to her.

"Because there is nothing much to eat and too much driving," she offered unhesitatingly. When she found out that I was from America, she wanted to know if America had communists, and if the people there were dying from hunger as the manager had told them.

"He said the workers in America live worse than we do. Is this true?"

I couldn't think of any worse food I had consumed in America, save perhaps in one or two of the many jails I had been in.

Gripping Crime Drama On Radio Waves Tonight

By N. F. T.

Strange cases turn up for G-men to grapple, not as movie plot themes so much as in stark reality. Presenting a radio adaptation of a very real and quite recent crime wave development, the Boston Sunday Advertiser is justified in directing special listener attention to "Murder Mania" as slated for the Front Page Drama period (WNAAC) tonight between 8:15 and 7 o'clock.

Air audiences throughout New England can hear an authentic version of the Ketchikan gang operations, with the setting that portrays the land and a state which is a real life heavy handed law.

Under the direction of the internationally famous conductor, the evening of the Ketchikan gang operations will be broadcast over station WNAAC and Worcester station of the Yankee Network from 8:15 to 10:30 p. m.

The rendition of "Murder Mania" will occupy the first half of the concert to be played the evening of Wednesday, July 20, New York City by the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra.

G. O. P. CHIEFS HOOPER GUESTS

By Associated Press

Tula Alta, Cal., July 20.—Disclosure that a number of prominent Republicans would be weekend guests of former President Hoover brought speculation today whether the gathering had political significance.

Mr. Hoover remained silent, and others at the pretentious residence said there was no political significance to the visit.

The guest list included Governor Harry W. Nick, Maryland and Colonel Frank Knox, Chicago publisher. Both have been mentioned as possible Republican presidential candidates.

Former War Secretary Patrick J. Hurley and former United States Solicitor General James M. Heck also were expected.

FLOYD GIBBONS' PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

There's quite a flamboyant, futuristic air about this little sketch, sent in to us by Lillian Lund, aged 11, of 59 Broadway avenue, Quincy, Mass.

What do you think of that tip-tilted nose, folks? It's what is known as a Nostril-Nose. Anybody that's the artist's impression, Floyd, and there doesn't seem to be anything we can do about it.

Many thanks, Lillian, and keep up the good work! Come on, all you guys and gals, let's see you do your darndest with gattling-gun Gibbons!—The Editor.

"Tug of War"

Ray Holmes' Pals Fight a Strange Battle With Ray's Life as the Prize

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO, EVERYBODY!

You know, fellow adventurers, I like fishing as well as anybody. Why, down in Miami once I caught a baby even feet five inches long, and it gave me the thrill of my life. But I still think fishing ought to be carried on with a certain amount of discretion. In most all the fishing I have ever done, I used worms, and maybe minnows, for bait.

But when RAYMOND J. HOLMES, of 233 MURRAY STREET, ELIZABETH, NEW JERSEY, goes out for piscatorial pursuits, he doesn't make any half-way job of it like I do. Ray is a bird who, in a pinch, will use HIMSELF for bait. Or, at any rate, he did once, but I think the adventure that happened to him that time cured him of ever trying the trick again.

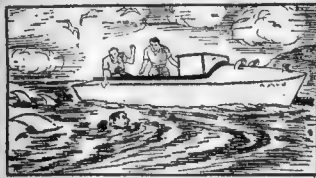

Of course, this isn't an ordinary fishing trip Ray was on—and he wasn't fishing in local waters, where most of the finny citizens would only be scared by a chunk of bait as big as Ray Holmes. Ray had joined the U. S. Army in 1932, and was sent to Fort Randolph, in the Panama Canal Zone, to do his two-year hitch.

Back in the States, Ray had always been a great lad to go fishing, and transplanting him to the Canal Zone didn't change his habits any to speak of. "What with the heat and sand-fles down there," he says, "you have to do something for recreation, and fishing it was—whenever I could get leave."

Ray had been in the Zone about eight months when one of those fishing trips of his led him into disaster. With two of his buddies from the barracks, he had gone on a three-day fishing trip in the San Blas Islands. They started out in a 35-foot motor boat and reached the islands after a 40-mile trip along the coast. It was 3 p. m. when they arrived, and by the time they had pitched camp and shaken up a meal it was too late for any more fishing that day. But at 6 o'clock the next morning they were out on the water trolling a short distance off shore.

By 9 o'clock they had caught five large tarpon. Then the wind died down, and the inevitable sand-fles started to work on them. "They swarmed around our heads by the million," Ray says, "and between trying to fish and keep from going crazy with the flies, I was pretty busy." And between those two occupations Ray managed to get into trouble, too.

He was standing up on the seat, with his line out, and paying more attention to the flies overhead than he was to keeping his balance, when the boat gave a sudden lurch and he fell—before Ray knew what had happened he was in the water. He struck out toward the boat, and then changed his mind. "It felt so good to get rid of those sand-fles," he explains, "that I didn't want to get out of the water." I just paddled and wallowed around, calling to the boys to join me. Then, suddenly, one of my buddies let out a yell. "Look out, Ray," he shouted, "there's a school of sharks coming at you!" Ray turned around in the water like a shot. "I almost swallowed my tongue," he says. "I looked to where he was pointing and saw dorsal fins galore. Then I turned and swam toward that boat for all that was in me, praying and hoping that those tiger sharks wouldn't see me. I was quite a distance away from the boat, now, as it had gone traveling away without me while I swam around in the water. And with those sharks behind me I looked to be at least twice as far away as I actually was."

And even as matters stood that boat was plenty far off, for in spite of his hopes and prayers those sharks HAD some sense coming after him. Ray must have broken half a dozen swimming records that day in his frantic haste to reach that boat. But he just didn't get there soon enough. He got TO the boat all right—but his hands were gone. He got out of breath, and so scared that he had no sense, and slipped as they clutched the gunwale, he just couldn't pull himself up over the side.

He shouted to his buddies for help—but at that moment a shark grabbed him. He could feel the tug as the big fish sank his teeth in his trouser leg, a fraction of an inch from his body. He started to go down screaming, and he still shivers every time he thinks of that awful moment. For just as the water closed over his face he lost consciousness.

When Ray regained consciousness he was lying in the bottom of the boat. Blood was streaming down the side of his leg, and his clothes were in ribbons. The shark had caught hold of his trouser leg and ripped it clean off. And while he was doing that he had grazed Ray's leg with his teeth, producing a row of long, deep scratches from which the blood was welling.

Well, sir, Ray looked himself over and then, from the buddies, learned how narrow a squeak he had really had. Those two buddies of his had grabbed his arm just as he was going under, and they actually had a tug of war with the shark for the possession of Ray's body. And lucky for Ray, they won that tug of war. The shark finally let go and let them have him.

Ray's buddies still insist that if Ray had had a flashlight in his pocket they'd have had a shark in addition to five fine tarpon, and Ray—well—Ray says he's glad to be back in the States, where the sand-fles don't attack in close formation and where the fish don't try to turn the tables by using the angler.
